HOPE, March 26 (AP) — An American Federation of Labor union says the organization is planning to organize teachers in this county.

McKnight, secretary of the Central Trades and Unions, said yesterday the union would be a great thing for teachers, but they would not be paid teachers in the state.

He said he felt that AFL would be a great thing for teachers, but they would not be paid teachers in the state.

THREE GOES INTO ONE?—Sen. Paul Douglas, (D-Ill.), tries to pour three glassfuls of water into one glass, and thereby gets a copy of President Truman's Economic Report, on which the glass rests, all wet. Douglas, a former professor, performed the "experiment" for Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder during a Congressional hearing. He was dramatizing his belief that large-scale purchases of Government bonds by the Federal Reserve System causes higher prices by expanding bank credit. The surplus water represents extra bank credit, which can't be contained.

negotiator for J. and L. said only: "Any comment from the company before we actually go into negotiations would be premature."

Washington, March 26 (AP) — A bitter scrap among high administration officials over wage policy simmered down today as steel firms and the CIO United Steelworkers returned to negotiations.

A strike of more than 850,000 workers in the vital steel industry is threatened for April 8, only two weeks away. Officials urged both sides to work for a speedy settlement to avert a walkout.

Negotiations got under way this afternoon in Pittsburgh between the union and U. S. Steel Corp. and Jones & Laughlin Steel, two of the largest producers. Talks with other major firms start tomorrow.

The administration row centered around Defense Mobilization Charles E. Wilson. He touched it off by labeling Wage Stabilization Board proposals for settling the steel wage issues "a serious threat" to inflation controls.

Wilson later sought to ease the situation by issuing a statement saying that, while he hadn't changed his mind, the WSB plan was appropriate as a basis for trying to work out a settlement.

WSB Chairman Nathan P. Feinsinger seemed satisfied. He had cut short a western speaking tour to fly back to Washington for what looked like a showdown fight between the WSB and Wilson that President Truman could settle.

Feinsinger told newsmen on arrival that he actually thought a entertainment worth his attention. The programs would be even better if as much time, talent and effort were put into them as are put into the commercials. That is why more and more thoughtful viewers prefer the artful and useful commercials to the drab programs that precede and follow them.

Maybe the answer is for the sponsors to concentrate even more on the commercials and drop the programs altogether.

My small God-daughter no longer looks at the programs. But she drops her toys and comes running to watch the commercials. They're more exciting.

Much has been written about the effect of television on children. But how about exploring its impact on housewives and household pets.

My own wife, for example, hasn't darned a pair of socks or sewn a button on my clothes since our set arrived.

"I've got TV eyes," she explains. Just can't see to thread a needle any more.

As to household pets, a friend of mine who owns a cat had to give up television in her home altogether.

"I have to choose between it and my cat," she said. "My cat was jealous. Everytime I turned on television she attacked the set and tried to scratch it to death."

On the other hand I have heard of another lady whose cat likes to sit and stare at the television set all day. Doesn't care about any particular program, but wanders about the house, restless and unhappy, until the set is switched back on.

I have also been told about a dog that whines unless the video screen is turned to a Western movie.

The only way I can figure it out is that he is a city dog, said the owner, and it is only by looking at Western movies that he ever gets to see trees.

Military Asks U. S. to Fight Hate Drive

Washington, March 26 (AP) — The State Department had military support today in urging that this country wage an all-out war of ideas against the Communists and their "sinister" hate-American campaign.

"We cannot do the job halfway," Gen. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, said.

The committee released $100 million supporting a 170-million-dollar State Department request for its overseas "Campaign for Truth" for the next fiscal year, starting July 1. That amount is more than double the $5 million dollars Congress approved last year.

State Department witnesses ran into sharp questioning from committee members critical of the size of the request.

Rep. Clevenger (R-Ohio) accused the administration of carrying on a "scare campaign" based on the threat of Soviet aggression.

Collins told the group this country must "enter into the struggle for men's minds with every resource at our command."

"We must make maximum use of every means of communication we possess," he said. "We must regain the psychological advantage. We must employ a positive approach instead of a negative defense."

Moss Harvey, chief of the State Department's Research Division for Russia and East Europe, testified that America faces a new "sinister twist in Soviet propaganda."

"Where the Russians once limited themselves to arousing antagonism against systems or ruling circles," he said, they have since Jan. 21, 1950, taught the individual Russian to hate the individual American.

This is being bolstered, Harvey said, with atrocity charges dating back to World War I and "its global in extent."

The current objectives is to "isolate the United States, to force it out of Europe and Asia," he testified. He estimated the Soviet propaganda outlay at more than $1,400,000,000 a year, which he said did not include costs of Communist party operations abroad.

Collins urged that the State Department take responsibility for combatting "ankee go home" propaganda in countries where increasing numbers of Americans are being sent in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, buildup. The proposed budget includes $1,130,000 for that purpose.

The expanded information campaign which were outlined included:

1. Extension of two additional floating radio relay stations like the newly commissioned Coast Guard ship Courier.
2. A $5,300,000 information program in Japan when the peace treaty goes into effect and the occupation ends.
3. Printing of some 24 million books to be sold in countries where Russian books are sold at around 5 cents a copy.
4. A $4,558,000 program of special films to combat communist propaganda movies in the Near, Middle and Far East.

Boiler Income Up in Arkansas

Little Rock, March 26 (AP) — Arkansas boiler industry is growing by leaps and bounds.

The Crop Reporting Service said today an estimated 89,834,000 commercial boilers were produced in the state last year. That's a 42 per cent increase from the 49,179,000 boilers produced in 1950.

The Service reported that gross income from Arkansas boilers in 1951 amounted to $59,968,000, compared to the 1950 income of $36,994,000.

Average weight of boilers marketed in 1951 was listed at 2.8 pounds and the average price per pound at $7.6 cents.

Boiler production by areas in 1951 was listed as follows:

- Northwest 50,400,000; North Central 9,000,000; South Central 5,000,000; all other sections 1,933,000.

University to Expand Station

Fayetteville, March 26 (AP) — University of Arkansas today announced purchase of 3,300 acres of land to expand its main agricultural experiment station here.

The land, bought from the federal government, is a part of the Lake Washington Land Utilization Project area, a 17,300-acre section adjacent to the experiment station which has been operated by the Soil Conservation Service.

Dean Lippert S. Ellis of the University's College of Agriculture said the land added to the experiment station will be used in beef cattle research.

Ike May See Pact Signed Before May

Paris, March 26 (AP) — Gen. Eisenhower stands a good chance of seeing the six-nation European army treaty signed and ready for ratification before the Maytime departure he is generally expected to make from his job as supreme Allied commander.

Experts predicted today the voluminous treaty creating the international force will be complete by mid-April. Shortly after, the foreign and defense ministers of France, West Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg are expected to meet in Paris to sign it.

That would just about complete the top priorities of Eisenhower's second "crusade in Europe." Most of the general's associated believe he will go home in the last two weeks of May to campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

These associates speculate Eisenhower may send his request next week to President Truman for relief from his mission as top Atlantic Pact military commander. The President already has said the general can come home whenever he wants.

After the treaty is signed, it must be approved by all six national parliaments before German troops can be recruited. In two of those legislatures at least — France's and West Germany's — it faces still standing in the way of agreement.

Assigned to this ticklish job are Brig. Gen. John H. (Mike) McNelis, Korea war hero, and Col. Robert Richardson. They have been meeting with experts of the European nations for some months.

This group has solved, to their satisfaction anyway, all major problems of merging the military power of the six nations into an international land-sea-air force of some two million men and 6,000 planes within the next three years. What remains are such administrative problems as uniform disciplinary regulations, a common uniform and pay scales.

Eisenhower's interest in the European army is so keen that he has assigned two of his officers to help iron out the technical difficulties.

'Phonemen in New Jersey Out on Strike

Newark, N. J., March 26 (UP) — More than 6,000 plant and accounting employees of New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. quit work today and the first CIO Telephone operators arriving at the company's main office here refused to cross picket lines.

A spokesman for the company said 75 operators honored the lines, set up at 7 a. m. (EST) after marathon wage negotiations collapsed with company and union officials only 50 cents apart.

However, the spokesman said the bulk of Bell's 3,500 day-shift operators throughout the state were not due to report until 9 a. m.

The company, which operates 1,750,000 telephones in 19 of 21 New Jersey counties, said strikers picketed offices and plants. Fifteen pickets marched in front of the Newark home office.

The company emphasized that dial-service operation would not be affected by the walkout unless mechanical breakdowns occur.

The strikers are members of the Independent Telephone Workers Union.

Allies to Woo All of Germany Despite Russia

Washington, March 26 (AP) — The Western Powers gave evidence today of pushing ahead with plans to cement as much of Germany as possible to the Western world regardless of Russia's tactics.

The toughened policy of the United States, Britain and France was spelled out in a note sent to Moscow yesterday and made public by the three nations last night. This 600-word declaration, responding to a new Soviet proposal of March 10 to start work on a German peace treaty, did two things:

1. It served notice on the Kremlin that Western nations, in close co-operation with the anti-Communist government of West Germany, are firmly committed to tying Germany in whole or in part to a purely defensive European community.
2. It challenged the Russians to prove the sincerity of their declared interest in unifying Germany by permitting a United Nations commission to go into the Soviet zone and find out what opportunity exists there for holding free elections.

Officials here predicted the new notes would be followed by a long series of exchanges such as has taken place regularly in the past five years.

These exchanges have consistently reflected a hardening of the antagonistic positions of the Communist and free nations.

Increasingly, the Russians have wrapped Soviet-controlled Germany into their Eastern European satellite system. The Western Powers have tightened their links with Western Germany to the point where they are now about to give it virtual independence, authorize it to rearm, and put it on the path of possible eventual membership in the North Atlantic Alliance.

The Russians had proposed that a United Germany be permitted to revive its Army, Navy and Air Force. That was the newest element in their note and was apparently forced by the impending defensive rearmament of Western Germany.

But in identical notes, the Big Three declared that such a national military force "would be a step backward and might jeopardize the emergency in Europe of a new era in which international relations in Europe would be based on co-operation and not on rivalry and distrust."

Kroger Gets 'Brand Name' Retailer Award

Selection of the Kroger Co. as "Brand Names Retailer of the Year" has been announced by Henry E. Abt, president of Brand Names Foundation, Inc. The retail food firm, which operates in 19 Middlewestern and Southern states won top honors among more than 500 companies in the food field.

Approximately 6,000 companies competed in the 20 retail classifications in which awards are given. A special plaque will be awarded Kroger in recognition of the company's distinguished contributions during 1931 in interpreting the story behind America's brand names. Presentation of the award will be made April 16, at the annual Brand Names Day dinner in New York. More than 1500 manufacturing, distribution, advertising, and retailing executives will be present to honor the winners.

Runners-up in the food field were Steinberg's Limited, Montreal, Quebec; National Tea Company, Chicago, Illinois; Food Fair Stores, Inc., Philadelphia, and the Grand Union Company, East Patterson, New Jersey. They will receive certificates of distinction citations.

This year's competition, according to Mr. Abt, saw the Foundation's staff almost snowed under by entries from more than 6,000 retailers, triple the total of last year's entries. The size and weight of the presentations submitted by the 345 finalists necessitated the construction of an extra store room in the Foundation's offices. Entries ranged from an essay to a 300-pound book. Before shipping them to Chicago for the final judging session, the Foundation insured them for $20,000.

Brand names foundation is an organization devoted to the principle that product names carry with them responsibility for consistent quality and constant effort toward product improvement. This development of brand names the shopper recognizes as trustworthy is an integral part of the American competitive free enterprise system, Mr. Abt explained.

DOROTHY DIX

Possessive Husband

Dear Miss Dix: Should a man give up old friends he has known in high-school days — if they are girl friends? My husband, Peter and I met after graduation from high school, married a few years later and moved several hundred miles away from home. We only go back about twice a year. We are happily married and have a family. When we go back home for a visit we spend our time with his folks, my folks, and mutual friends. However, he also makes a habit of dropping in to see some of his old friends, then comes home and tells me of the visit. Since I knew these girls slightly, I am interested in the news. I'd like to go with him on his calls, and though I've asked he has never taken me.

Peter is just naturally friendly with everybody. He also calls his old boy friends. Though I try to take these visits as a matter of course, as the years progress they still occur at least once a year. I'm sure my husband sees nothing wrong in seeing these ladies, but I wonder and worry. After nine years he still goes to see the two married ones who live in town and the sister of one of them who lives with her mother.

he likes people, and is especially fond of old friends.

Better Than New Sirens

This trait is lots more comfortable for you than having him constantly making new friends—which could be a source of potential danger. Much better old girl friends than newly met sirens. Furthermore, since the visits only occur once a year, your green-eyed monster really is trespassing on the wrong premises.

There is a great deal of comfort in old friends, and both husband and wife can profit from their association. Too many young people discard their old friends after marriage, only to regret their thoughtlessness later. Very often a reminiscent conversation with a pal of high-school vintage can dispel unhappy moments in the present. The value of these nostalgic sprees is difficult to gauge, but one who enjoys them should not be deprived of the pleasure. Peter apparently does like these forays into the past, so don't make an issue of them, and try to stop your worrying.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm very much interested in writing to some boys in Germany, or Korea, but don't know how to get names and addresses of boys who'd like to receive mail. Could you tell me where to get them?

Answer: There should be some sort of clearing house for an exchange of addresses so that mail to our boys overseas will go in an unbroken stream. The best source:

Home Club Activities Coordinated

The 19 Home Demonstration Clubs in Hempstead County have 371 active members. These 19 clubs form the County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs. Four Council meetings are held annually. Officers are elected each 2 years. Officers for 1932-33 are: Mrs. Monroe Stuart, Ozark-St. Paul HD Club, president; Mrs. H. E. Patterson, Melrose HD Club, vice-president; Mrs. E. H. Byers, Liberty Hill HD Club, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. John Keck, Hopewell HD Club, reporter. These four officers comprise the executive committee and with the president of each Home Demonstration Club, the planning board.

For the past three years the HD clubs have earned money to send a chartered bus with from 30 to 35 Home Demonstration Club members to the State Council meeting held each year in Fayetteville. After the Council meeting these women made a three day sight-seeing trip through the Arkansas Ozarks before returning to Hempstead county.

In May, a home demonstration dress revue is held, with any home demonstration club member entering her garments in competition with others in three divisions, cotton house dress, Sunday or best dress, and suits.

Also in May an Amateur Night is held with each home demonstration club having one part, a skit, musical number, reading, or whatever they choose. This is held in the Hope City Hall and proceeds go for the years project.

On Adult Visiting Day at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station the home demonstration clubs have a good booth. These proceeds also go to the years project.

Last year a Harvest Festival was held in the Exhibit Hall at Fair Park in October. This proved such a success that another will be held this October. Home demonstration club members and their families were served a complete meal and enjoyed an evening of games and group singing under the direction of Mr. Graham P. Wright, Extension Community Activities Specialist.

Council meetings are held in March, June, September, and December. Routine business is taken care of during the morning session with a planned educational program during the afternoon. The years project is chosen at the March meeting. The December meeting is a Christmas party. A planned dinner is served to all home demonstration club members present with the gift exchange following. An auction sale of hand-made articles follows the proceeds going for the years project.

The program of home demonstration clubs is well planned with phases that interest all who belong. Hempstead County has a goal of 500 members in '32. Arkansas has a goal of 82,000 home demonstration club members in '32. There are no requirements other than interest for membership. If there is a home demonstration club in your community why not join. If there is none see Mrs. Lorraine Blackwood, Hempstead County Home Demonstration Agent, at the courthouse and she will help you organize a Home Demonstration Club.

Convention May Bring Up Blues

New York, March 26 (AP)—Delegates to the July political conventions may wear the blues — as well as sing them.

He says, indeed, that they may become "the greatest blue-shirt conventions of all time." That's because blue shows up well on television.

U. S. Carrying Burden of NATO Military

Washington, March 25 (AP)—Army units in this country, including the National Guard and the reserves, are carrying the burden of NATO military commitments to the United States, according to a report by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

The committee, headed by Senator Charles McNary, is studying the question of whether the United States should be required to contribute more troops to the NATO forces.

The committee's report states that the United States is currently providing the majority of the troops for the NATO forces, and that this is a heavy burden for the United States to carry.

The committee is recommending that the United States should be required to contribute more troops to the NATO forces, and that this should be done in a way that is fair to all of the countries in the NATO alliance.

Treaty Organization decision to equip 80 combat-ready divisions in Western Europe by the end of this year.

The turn-in order applies to all Army units in this country, the Army said.

The Marine Corps, which uses much the same heavy equipment as the Army, also will contribute military vehicles.

Neither the Navy nor the Air Force is expected to have to turn in any equipment from their active or reserve units.

In a statement replying to questions on the subject, the Army said the turn-in order was issued to speed the delivery of equipment "to our own forces overseas as well as those of our allies."

Officials interpreted this to mean that the bulk of the equipment taken from units at home would go to the Allies. A small portion is known to have been earmarked to replace tanks and vehicles worn out by American combat use in Korea and fighting in Europe.

The Army's official reply to questions was made available only after it had been reviewed by the Defense Department. The final version said the delivery schedule called for priority shipment to forces already engaged in hostilities, "as in Korea and Indochina, or who are most likely to be engaged in the event of aggression elsewhere."

The Army plans to substitute older, World War II type equipment as soon as possible so that most reserve and National Guard units will be equipped for summer field training.

Judge Lets Dog Decide Master

Huntington, W. Va., March 25 (AP)—Bye-bye Gibson claimed the hound was his, and its name was Rover. Not so, said Therman Diahman. He said he owned the dog and its name was Mike.

Judge H. Clay Wirth ordered the dog brought into Courtroom Pleas Court yesterday and told Diahman, "Call the dog."

"Come here Rover," said Gibson, and Rover trotted over to him.

Gibson took the dog home.

May Have Tax Witness Take a Physical

Washington, March 25 (UP)—House tax investigators have decided to have a doctor of their choosing examine Daniel A. Bolich, to determine whether the former assistant Internal Revenue Commissioner is well enough to undergo questioning, it was learned today.

Bolich, who lives in New York, failed to appear yesterday when he was subpoenaed to testify at a closed-door session of the House Ways and Means subcommittee investigating tax scandals.

His attorneys presented a doctor's certificate which said that Bolich, wanted for questioning about his handling of tax cases while he was an Internal Revenue official, was ill and unable to appear.

Subcommittee sources said Bolich had pleaded illness on other occasions when he was scheduled to be questioned.

Bolich is a friend of former Internal Revenue Commissioner Joseph D. Numan, Jr., who already has been questioned by the subcommittee behind closed doors. Numan is slated to appear in a public session soon.

The disclosure of Bolich's failure to appear for questioning came amid these other developments in the tax scandal investigation:

1. Hyman Harvey Klein, Baltimore liquor dealer, appeared before the subcommittee for a second day of questioning. He gave the subcommittee further details of how in 1944-46, he made $5,000,000 on a $1,000 investment in a group of foreign corporations that sold Canadian whisky in the United States.

2. Rep. John W. Byrnes (R-Wis.) suggested that Senate Republican Leader Styles Bridges "clear up" his role in Klein's $7,000,000 tax case. Bridges discussed the Klein case with Internal Revenue officials. But Klein said he didn't know Bridges and didn't know why he intervened in the case.

Murder, Suicide Orphans 11 Children

Frederick, Md., March 25 (AP)—Eleven children were orphaned today because their father killed himself in a police trap after fatally shooting their mother.

The police said Mehrl Victor Stull shot himself yesterday in an open field near here after he was trapped between two troopers hunting him.

His 41-year-old wife Martha was fatally wounded Sunday night in the kitchen of Stull's tavern near here.

A daughter, Shirley, told officers Stull wanted his wife to quit her job as a waitress in Frederick and return home to care for the children. An argument developed. Stull hit his wife with a glass, knocking her down, then grabbed a foreman-made deer rifle and shot her, the girl said.

Five Children Abandoned by Parents

Blufffield, W. Va., March 25 (AP)—Five youngsters, in step-ladder from 8 years to 9 months, were frolicked happily at the Union station today, apparently not knowing they had been abandoned by their parents.

Their father, Kelly Half, a coal miner, was found on a downtown street with instructions to take a blonde Joyce Ann, to take a blonde note to the police station.

She herded the little ones, who were carrying the youngest, the three blocks to the station and then gave the note to Chief C. N. W. son.

The note explained their mother left home Thursday night, with other man while she (the father) was at work. "She ort to be made to care for the little kids," City officials took them over the mission and made arrangements to care for one with an infected ear and another recovered from the chicken pox. Then they began looking for Half and wife.

Authorities across the state in Tazewell County, where a small mining town of Pocahontas is located, acknowledged that they had tried to pay someone to look for the children while he worked.

The letter said in part: "I have went everywhere to look for somebody to take care of the but I can't find any more. You ask the neighbors if I don't see all the time. I heard she wife, caught the bus Sunday in Blufffield to Roanoke."

"So it's up to you to get press on it. Maybe she will tell their pictures in the paper, come to see the little baby who comes all the time for her, and other kids too."

The Reds had cut near Tanjong Lim, 30 miles north of here.

Eight other police were seriously wounded.

Henri Lemay, a fruit bachelor of Charleston, S. C., and his spinster sister, Heloise, had managed to send their orphaned niece, Leonie Hughes, through a fashionable school at Baltimore. She is about to graduate and return home to them and to a more abundant life, perhaps, a long delayed family legacy may now in this year of 1934, be released to the Lemays. Henri is socially ambitious for his niece. He hopes and prays that she has outgrown attachment for Lincoln Calvert, a local boy grown to handsome manhood, an agricultural school graduate, ambitious to become a scientific farmer. The Calverts are Unionists and Henri despises them. Joseph Newman, a back woods boy with a golden voice, is among Leonie's admirers. Eventually, he hopes to sing with the opera. But secretly Henri dreads the day when this cherished girl shall be taken from him in marriage, for he himself loves her possessive Lincoln Calvert's popularity with Charleston's first families grows, and Henri's rage mounts. But petty enviousness vanishes on the great proud day of Leonie's graduation. There on the campus at Baltimore, Henri meets the wealthy McDevitt family, whose daughter, Leonie's close friend, also is graduating.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

LEONIE left Henri in the sitting room with his thoughts. Looking at the throngs of girls and their relatives coming and going, he felt sorry for Leonie, with no female relative to help her over the details of leave-taking. As often in the past, he had a sense of having deprived the child of something which could never be compensated.

"Well, there you are," Leonie said, interrupting his regretful meditations. "I was afraid one of the girls might steal you."

She was wearing a gray coat suit with a voluminous long skirt that covered all but the tips of her high-laced brown shoes. She indicated the small bag at her side.

"Everything's packed and the luggage is checked and we're all ready to see Sister Immaculate," she declared. "Let's go and get it over with."

Henri took her bag and they walked over to the main building. They waited their turn for a few minutes and then entered the office, where Sister Immaculate sat at her desk. She said politely:

"Leonie has great possibilities. Mr. Lemay, I only hope she isn't going to forget us. She has a fine mind, and I'm going to remember her in my prayers. I'll ask Our Blessed Lady to watch over her."

She turned to Leonie, who sat in embarrassment at these commendations. "Leonie, my dear child, always remember that if you want any advice you can always write to me. And now good-bye, my dear child, and God bless you."

She embraced Leonie, said a pleasant word or two to Henri, who bowed, and they were ushered out.

"A fine woman," Henri said, feeling called upon to make a pronouncement.

Leonie shrugged. "I suppose so. But she's narrow, and she can be very caity, too." She took Henri's arm. "Now, Uncle, she said, 'we can have some time to ourselves and talk. I want to hear about everything.'"

Until that afternoon, Henri had not eaten in a restaurant in years. Not since he had first brought Leonie to college. To impress Leonie with his worldly wisdom, he was masterful toward the waiter and quick in his choice of dishes, and although he chose a good one, he was not a good one.

Leonie said, "What will people say? I certainly wouldn't care one teeny bit what they said about me."

"That's the way you feel when you're young," Henri said, "but when you get older you begin to have some respect for your neighbor's opinion."

She was worried about what people will say.

"Everybody gets back to that," Leonie said. "What will people say? I certainly wouldn't care one teeny bit what they said about me."

"That's the way you feel when you're young," Henri said, "but when you get older you begin to have some respect for your neighbor's opinion."

Slipping his coffee now, Henri asked:

Who are these McDevitts, Leonie? Are they related to the people who used to live on Ashley avenue?"

Leonie considered the question. "Oh, you mean the ones with that old broken-down carriage that they rode around in until it almost came apart on King street? No, these aren't the same McDevitts at all. They have lots of money."

Henri shrugged off the money. "And what does this gentleman do?" he inquired.

"I never could find out," Leonie said. "Estella's sort of close-mouthed about it. I think, though, that he's a gambler."

"You mean," Henri asked, quivering, "that they accepted a gambler's daughter at St. Catherine's college?"

"I suppose they had the money to pay."

"I'm afraid living in the North has infused you to think about things a little differently," Henri said. "No one in the Lemay family ever associated with gamblers. I hope this girl hasn't taught you cyard games."

"Now, Uncle, I didn't say Estella was a gambler, did I? It isn't something you inherit."

"Well, I don't know," Henri said, considerably shaken. "I should think that would put an end to any idea of your going to visit them. I don't think your aunt would allow it."

"Everybody in Charleston is so righteous," Leonie said. "And as for what you say about living in the North, people in Baltimore consider themselves Southerners."

"But they have no right to," Henri said stiffly. "They're just getting above themselves."

"Northerners," Leonie said, anxious to divert the argument, "have funny ideas about Southern life. There was a girl from Philadelphia, Anna O'Halloran, and she said to me that it must be wonderful to live on those big plantations."

"You must remember," Henri said, "that they haven't had our opportunities for culture."

"There were one or two fairly nice girls from Boston," Leonie said. "I think they were related to the Lowell and Cabot families, or so they said."

"I never heard of either," Henri said. "I suppose they are rich millionaires."

"They seemed to have nice manners."

"Of course, there must be exceptions," Henri admitted, but not without a doubtful intonation.

"And, speaking of Northerners, Miss Antoinette is going to have paying guests in her house."

"That sounds like a good idea. She's the money, and there's certainly no use of her rattling around that great big empty house."

"She's worried about what people will say."

"Everybody gets back to that," Leonie said. "What will people say? I certainly wouldn't care one teeny bit what they said about me."

"That's the way you feel when you're young," Henri said, "but when you get older you begin to have some respect for your neighbor's opinion."

and they went. Retrieving Leonie's bag and his valise from the check room he paid another dime, musing at the extravagant customs of Baltimore.

He put up his stick to hail a cab and they drove off to the Union station and got on their train.

The excessive familiarity things at home made Leonie how as if her absence had been a dream. She had been looking forward to her return, but now began to feel trapped. It was difficult to get away from Charles unless you were rich, and hadn't much faith in her. Un Henri's dream of getting money from his French relative.

She heard her Aunt Heloise call in the front door, cheerful as usual, and a thing Leonie had not noticed before, a ride no longer in her own gentle way. Aunt Heloise, Leonie thought, didn't really belong in Charleston. There wasn't a spot for her to do.

"There isn't enough for anyone to do," she said to herself.

Henri's deep gruff tones came over her ear, and then Aunt Heloise laughing coming up the stairs, tugging her hat and prayerbook, and changing from her Sunday best to a starched housedress, and humming a song.

"Come in," Leonie said in reply to her knock at the connected door.

"I'm getting formal in my age," Heloise said. "Can't I burst in now. How are you, ch? Had some rest? What's that you're reading?"

"Omar Khayyam. It's very good," Leonie said. "How were pers, Auntie?"

"About the same as usual," Heloise said with a smile. "Same pers, same people. Well, I'm going down now to fix supper."

"Let me help you, Auntie," Leonie said. "You sit right in. No Yankee housework for the first you get home."

"I expect to help you to house," Leonie said, since Heloise smiled skeptically.

"I'll remember that," she said. "It's ridiculous for you to do all that money for. Queens' the two of us could run the house."

Heloise held a finger to her lips and opened her eyes very wide. She had a wonderfully funny Leonie thought. "Do you want to bring on another earthquake?" she said. "Look it. The Lemay-Kelton Island didn't have a salt? Think, think."

"I don't suppose he'll ever over those ways of his," Leonie said.

"Not very likely. Your aunt hasn't changed much in years. I expect he'll be about a butler before long. What money he expects to get!"

"I wish something like that would happen to him."

Heloise shrugged. "You've been always been a dreamer. Get a lot of gum out of your mouth. Just look at you. Leonie, you will, won't you, continue, a serious look over her face. "I mean, not him in my apartment."

"Please don't say that."
